October's meeting

October's meeting was a real treat as we were lead in a card workshop by Derick Finn from the Caesar Hat & Wand Magic Circle in Kitchener!

Derick started the evening by presenting his entire card routine from start to finish, so we could get a spectator's viewpoint of the complete routine. First, he performed a packet trick called "Cascade", where 5 identical cards turned into different cards – all with different backs!

He then found the four Aces (magically, of course!) and presented Dai Vernon's "Twisting the Aces". After loosing the Aces into the pack, Edna Scott was called up to help Derick with his next effect – Steve Beam's "Quad Prediction" – where four prediction cards are used as indexes to find the Aces!

Derick then presented a neat twist on the "Last Trick of Dr. Daley", using a poker chip to keep track of the read and black cards – which of course trade places!

He ended his routine with an excellent presentation of Harry Lorraine's "Out of This Universe", where Edna dealt the deck randomly into 3 piles – but one pile had all red cards; one had all black; and the third had an equal number of red and black!

Following the workshop, Derick walked us through each effect and helped us all with the required sleights. He hopped from table to table, spending time and helping each person as they needed it.

In the end, we all walked away with exciting, useful material that we can all perform.

Thanks, Derick!

11th Annual Motor City Convention Nov. 9-11

This year's Motor City Convention will take place Nov. 9-11 in Taylor, Michigan. All events take place at the Ramada Inn in Taylor, 4 miles from Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

This year's featured performers: David Acer will leave you in stitches with his combination of great magic and comedy. John Armstrong, Magic Castle Close-Up Magician Of The Year, will dazzle you with his outstanding card magic. Diamond Jim Tyler has received awards from The Texas Association of Magicians and the International Brotherhood of Magicians. John Rogers, Mr. Wooden Cigars, has some very diversified magic that you will enjoy watching and learning.

As a special surprise, Aldo Colombini will be presenting his lecture on Sunday afternoon. The economy in Michigan has not been the greatest. In an effort to try and offset this in a very minor way, the Colombini lecture will be free of charge to anyone who wishes to attend.

How to copy other performers effectively

(From a series of articles from Quentin Reynolds)

There is a great dilemma in magic. We are told to be ourselves, be original and develop our own material. We are told not to copy others or use their material without permission. Yet as humans, we learn by imitation or modelling others. It is our nature. So, how do we reconcile the contradiction?

First let me say that over the centuries magic has evolved and each generation adds something new to the pot. To ignore this knowledge and experience would be plain silly.

I suggest that we, as magicians usually copy and imitate the wrong things. We copy other magicians' tricks, routines and lines. Watch a magic club close-up competition. You can tell the performers who have learnt their routines from DVDs. They will present each effect in the style of the performer they learnt it from.

So what should we be copying? We should look deeper at each performer we admire and ask ourselves what qualities they are bringing to their performance and how can we duplicate those qualities in our own routines. I'll give you two examples.

In the mid-1980's I saw ventriloquist Ron Lucas perform a routine where his naked hands talked to each other. Each hand had its own personality and the routine was very entertaining. Suddenly, Ron holds his hands with flat palms facing the audience and went silent. The two hand characters were gone and we the audience realized that we had been drawn into Ron's magical world but were now back into reality. That moment, made us realize just how strong the illusion had been.

I wanted to create a similar type of moment in my own show. In my Five Minutes With A Pocket Handkerchief routine, the hanky evolves into a mouse, which becomes animated and goes out of control. After a minute of this, I grab his head and tail, stretching them out and suddenly, the mouse is gone and I'm left with just a handkerchief. Like with Ron Lucas, there is stunned silence for a moment as the audience realizes what's happened.

In Arnold Furst's review of the Dante Show, he describes Dante's overture and opening. A sequence of curtains open in turn, each revealing some new scenery, assistants or setting, until eventually Dante appears. When I did two week theatre runs at Christmas in Dublin, I wanted a similar style of opening. However the theatre only held 220, and had just front curtains and stage backdrop.

It did have two sets of front of house lights - one set on a dimmer and the other with an on/off switch. There was also a mirror ball. For the overture I used the famous Can Can music from Orpheus in the Underworld. This music besides being bright and energetic has three peaks. On the first peak the main lights went out eliciting an audible reaction from the audience. On the next peak, the house lights dimmed to out. Another gasp! On the third two mini-spotlights hit the mirror ball, getting another reaction.

While I didn't achieve Dante's opening, it inspired a strong opening with the facilities available.

These are the kind of things that are worth copying and the best place to look is not other magicians but other performers like comedians and singers.
